

TRANSATLANTIC SUMMER WORKSHOPS

The Graduate Center of the City University of New York (CUNY) and Ruhr-University, Bochum, Germany

invite

all social sciences & humanities PhD candidates to participate in a two-summer, transatlantic workshop on

Globalization, Nationalism, and Populism in the Transatlantic World

Summer 2017

[Jul 31-Aug 4]

CUNY Graduate Center

Summer 2018

[dates TBD]

Ruhr University Bochum (RUB)

The workshops have four goals: They provide opportunities for transatlantic feedback and peer discussions through presentations of your research to the international group. Second, the workshops will also relate practical academic know-how via a series of expert workshops on US and German networking cultures, fundraising landscapes, and publishing trends. A third goal is to provide networking opportunities with your transatlantic peers and faculty. The workshop will also facilitate long-term cooperation between the CUNY Graduate Center and RUB.

The organizers will cover transatlantic airfare & accommodations for GC doctoral students to City University of New York for the Summer 2017 workshop.

The workshop program, consisting of formal and informal discussions and lectures, will be directed by Professors John Torpey and Benjamin Hett (GC CUNY) and, from the German side, Profs. Constantin Goschler and Michael Wala (RUB).

How to apply: If your research relates to the workshop theme in the broadest sense, please send a one-paragraph description of your interest in the program and a two-page research brief to Christopher Kirchberg (Christopher.Kirchberg@rub.de) by March 30, 2017. Don't hesitate to email us with any questions.
