Utrecht Network’s PhD School: Growing Diversity as a Societal Challenge

What challenges do researchers engaged in the field of “diversity” face? Which range of methods, tools and skills are needed to interpret the growing complexity in contemporary societies? How can social research really affect public debate? Which role can the study of diversity fulfill today?

The PhD Summer School Growing Diversity as a Societal Challenge is suited for PhD Students who are engaged with the analysis of social changes and growing diversity in contemporary multicultural societies.

Application deadline: June 15. Selection of candidates will start the 1st of June and attendance is limited to 15 qualifying applicants. Visit www.lefphdschools.eu.
